

Mariners are a hardy bunch, and those who, with line and hook, battle half-ton beasts of the ocean are even more so. In navigating the second year of a pandemic that has upended life as we know it, the power of resilience has never been more evident—and vital too. The deep-sea anglers who have embraced the competitiveness and camaraderie of the Bermuda Triple Crown competition for the past 20 years personify that resilience for us as a destination.

We welcome you to our home. As a country, we have diligently worked to ensure that our destination is as safe as possible for our vulnerable, for our citizens and for our visitors. Our commitment to safety undergirds our world-class pandemic management protocols that have been lauded by visitors and international health monitoring bodies alike. Your safety is our priority.

At 21 square miles, our fish-hook-shaped outpost in the middle of the Atlantic Ocean fights well above its weight class as a destination, and we know that persistence, adaptability and heart are the not-so-secret ingredients that keep us off the ropes. Our natural beauty, cultural riches and bountiful oceans don't hurt either.

As we mark the 21st staging of the Bermuda Triple Crown competition, we invite you to add an extra dash of Bermuda to your itinerary and plan a return visit now. We encourage you to celebrate the myriad attractions that are distinctly Bermudian—from our delightful food culture to the rich historic connections that tie our small island to some of the world's most significant moments in history, and the adventures that await on land and sea.
